

2017 REAL ESTATE SUPERSTARS

FOR FAMILY AND PHILANTHROPY

Christine Espinoza with RE/MAX Fine Properties

Christine Espinoza knows a house is more than a home. It's the place you raise your children, it's every holiday, every special moment and it's the place where you can escape the world around you. Every neighborhood is a community, one that welcomes you. She knows these things because she was taught it from a young age, by her real estate broker father and that is how she is raising her two boys.

Espinoza's father had been in real estate since before she was born. Originally from Ohio, she moved to Arizona at the age of six and attended the University of Arizona. After graduation, she got her real estate license and worked by her father's side, jumping on the fast track to learn the industry. It truly was a family run business. Now, with RE/MAX Fine Properties Espinoza is celebrating her 21st year in real estate.

"My favorite part of this career is not only meeting new and interesting people daily, but being able to help them with one of the largest financial decisions of their lives. I build relationships with my clients that extend well beyond the sale of their home. I enjoy being my clients' friend and go to person if they need a referral for anything."

Espinoza's career affords her the opportunity to enjoy her own family, something that has always been incredibly important to her. "My boys, Dominic and Brody are actively involved in their schools and play sports, so pretty much every weekend when I'm not with a client, I'm on a field or a court watching their games," says Espinoza. "I think my clients appreciate the fact that I understand they have busy lives, because I do too. Knowing the market and the industry saves my client time and hassle, making their transactions as smooth as possible, so they can concentrate on their lives and families."

Espinoza also supports the community and her boys are not afraid to pitch in. "I started a nonprofit women's group in 2012 called Platform Scottsdale. We host social events for women, giving them the opportunity to connect, as well as bringing awareness to various charities in our area," says Espinoza. "I take my boys every month to feed the homeless in Phoenix, and we set up collection stations for hygiene products and sneakers for the people in need in our community."
